TO LOVERS OF PEONIES

THE herbaceous Peony (Paeonia Sinensis) has been called the Queen of Spring Flowers. In color-effect she certainly is a powerful rival of the rose. Peonies prefer a heavy ground, but will grow in any good garden soil. They need a free sunny position and plenty of well rotted manure.

The fall and early spring is the best time to plant Peonies. Have the ground dug, 2 or 3 feet deep; and plant about 3 to 4 feet apart, care must be taken to plant the roots from 2 to 3 inches below the surface, too deep planting produces shy bloomers. Get the ground firm around the roots and mulch with leaves or stable manure 3 to 4 inches high.

The first season after planting the plants often will have imperfect flowers, but they will increase in beauty from year to year. Occasional watering during dry spells will be of great benefit.

By far too many varieties of our popular Peony have been listed in the catalogues of our seedsmen. Many of them are much alike and a great percentage not worth planting. In the following list of 25 choice varieties I have tried to include only those varieties which during my many years of experience in this country and in Europe have proved to be the best of the good varieties.

You will not receive from me an elaborate catalogue with cuts or gaily colored plates, it costs a great deal of money to issue such books which naturally have to be added to the cost of the plants or the quality has to suffer.

Should you wish a variety not listed, let me quote you prices and tell you why I did not list same amongst the 25 best.

I aim to establish my reputation by sending out only healthy plants true to name and in case of error I will gladly replace or refund the money.

Do not hesitate to ask me for advice; it has always been a great pleasure to me to correspond with plantlovers everywhere. All orders small or large will receive my own prompt and careful personal attention.

Would be glad to hear from you.

Yours truly,

FRANK KOEHLER
